Bisco extends its product range by a high-viscous flow composite - MICRO ESTHETIC flow-viscous

Products are being increasingly criticised for their clinical specialties by specialist circles. One of them is the flowability that makes headlines in the trade press because of its carcinogenic effects.

BISICO response:

The introduction of a flowable Bis-GMA free composite.

During development of this product, a number of important criteria had to be met:

- Free of Bis-GMA to increase the biocompatibility and to minimize health risks
- High viscosity
- Extremely high radiopacity to ensure that it can be better identified on X-ray images
- Micro-ESTHETIC flow-viscous is solely light curing, ensuring the highest possible precision and quality
- Micro-ESTHETIC flow-viscous is available in 2 g syringe in the three most popular shades A2, A3.5 and A3.

Excellent physical properties such as low polymerisation shrinkage, extremely low polymerisation stresses are a matter of course. In short - it is a flowable composite for nearly all cases.

UC Medical

Smile-on has been on a long journey before the SmiLe-20 launch. This teeth whitening system has been developed by a company who has beenISO-certified and complies with CE regulations. Their philosophy is simple: if you invest in your workforce, create a culture of passion for everything you do, provide a stimulating and supportive working environment, the benefits to your business are widespread. Last week see the team at Dental Design passed – ‘without hesitation’ , no less. It’s a fantastic achievement for Dental Design and its team and one that acknowledges the ethos that has underpinned the company’s continued growth and development over recent years. A delight Ralph Rees, Managing Director of Dental Design, said, ‘We involve the team in the company’s progress and that exposes them to exciting new opportunities for their own development. Everyone becomes enthused, it’s infectious, and that generates a stimulating environment where new ideas and better ways of working are constantly being suggested – everyone wins: the customers, the team and the business!’

An amazing outcome and sincere reflection of the people and philosophy behind Dental Design’s continuing success.
